Location

Bellshill is a town in North Lanarkshire, Scotland, located about 10 miles southeast of Glasgow city centre and 37 miles west of Edinburgh. It forms part of a continuous suburban settlement anchored by Motherwell, with strong transport links including Bellshill railway station on the Argyle and Shotts Lines, proximity to the M8 and M74 motorways, and access to active travel networks like the Greenlink Cycle Path.

Bellshill's economy has transitioned from historical reliance on coal mining, iron and steel production, and weaving to modern sectors like logistics, distribution, and services. Key assets include large industrial estates such as Bellshill and Righead along the A725, as well as nearby sites like Strathclyde Business Park, Eurocentral (with a railway freight terminal), and Mossend, which support employment in manufacturing, warehousing, and transport. Its strategic location near major motorways and rail networks enhances its role as a commuter hub with diverse job opportunities, bolstered by good public transport connections to Glasgow, Motherwell, Livingston, and Edinburgh.

Bellshill serves an extensive catchment area as part of the Glasgow City Region, with nearly 980,000 people within a 30-minute drive and about 3.5 million within a one-hour drive, underscoring its potential for logistics and commuter-based growth. Its integration into the broader Motherwell settlement and connections to regional employment sites position it to draw from a wide labor and consumer base across west-central Scotland
